We are living in perilous times, but democracy will survive. As you go from Bridgeport High School I know you will do your part. We have aimed to have you think of what lies ahead. Profit from the lessons of the past, live as wisely as may be in this bewildering present,—and look with faith and courage to a better and happier future.

With whole-hearted devotion to our country's course, to its glorious past, its resolute present, and its future bright with hope may I join with the class of 1942 in a pledge of allegiance.

In this period of crisis one hesitates to speak authoritatively of the future. Crises have come and passed in other ages and always it has been found that a person consecrated to the ideal of doing his best each day reaps a just reward. So may each of you Seniors go on his way from these halls imbued with a deep realization of the importance of his daily contribution to society. Then our country will emerge from this upheaval a stronger state and our society will be uplifted because we are a part of it.
